A PREVIOUS COLUMN AND PARAGRAPH

AGUSTA, May 31.—

A young man of this city, Fred Ellis, started this afternoon to cross the Kennebec river over the dam, in a common flat-boat. He had got about to the middle of the river when a signal struck the boat and drove him over the dam. Seeing no escape from beneath over the dam, he started his boat head on and calmly faced the danger. As the boat was about to go over he dropped his paddle, threw himself into the bottom of the boat and held on like a terrier. The boat, captured on the dam, but it came up of its own accord, and the boat was fortunately on the right side up, but had shipped a heavy sea. Ellis, however, clinging to the boat and was carried half a mile or more down river, when he was rescued by a boat from the schooner Katie Mitchell.
